121. Suppose that one of your friends argued that the demonstrations should be banned because allowing the group to express its ideas would cause great damage to society because people might be persuaded by their message. By banning the demonstration we are just protecting the security of our society. Would that make you change your mind and oppose the demonstration taking place, or would you not change your mind and continue to support allowing the demonstration to take place.

ROTATE PLACEMENT OF Q124 TO Q126:
START WITH QUESTION _____ (27-29)

124. Suppose that one of your friends argued that the demonstrations should be allowed because the U.S. Constitution grants all groups the right to hold public rallies and demonstrations. Even ideas we disagree with have the right to be expressed. Would that make you change your mind and allow the demonstration to take place, or would you not change your mind and continue to oppose the demonstration taking place?
(30)
- 1 Change — support the demonstration to take place
2 Not Change — continue to oppose the demonstration taking place
- 7 Refused 8 Don't Know 9 No Answer
125. Suppose that one of your friends argued that the demonstration should be allowed because you can't trust the government to decide who can demonstrate. If this group is banned, it makes it easier for the government to ban demonstrations by other groups just because they oppose something the government is doing. Would that make you change your mind and allow the demonstration to take place, or would you not change your mind and continue to oppose the demonstration taking place?
(31)
- 1 Change — support the demonstration to take place
2 Not Change — continue to oppose the demonstration taking place
- 7 Refused 8 Don't Know 9 No Answer
126. Suppose that one of your friends argued that the demonstration should be allowed because the best way to show how stupid some people's ideas are is to allow them to speak out freely. If people are allowed to hear the group's message, then it will be clear to nearly everyone that the group is crazy, and support for the group's ideas would decline. Would that make you change your mind and allow the demonstration to take place, or would you not change your mind and continue to oppose the demonstration taking place?
